From Losing Her Daughter's Memories to Getting Them Back ✨

Pratiksha came to me after losing her phone. But what truly broke her heart wasn't the loss of the device—it was the thought of losing all the precious photographs and memories of her daughter stored inside it.

Those pictures were irreplaceable memories, and she was deeply emotional about losing them.

During our sessions, she began shifting her emotional state from fear, sadness and helplessness to hope and belief. And then something that felt almost magical happened—she was able to recover all the photographs of her daughter. ❤️

But her story didn't end there.

A few days later, she received an unexpected call from the Cyber Crime Department, and she eventually got her lost phone back as well.

The experience became more than just recovering a phone and photographs. It gave Pratiksha a renewed sense of hope and also motivated her to start taking greater care of her health and overall well-being.

✨ Her biggest transformation: What began with the pain of losing something deeply precious ended with her recovering not only her daughter's memories and her phone, but also a renewed belief in herself and her ability to move forward.
